Mood music is car music, and whizzin' along in a car can be fun. Whizzin' along in a car, especially at night, can be even better. With the right company, even better still. Apart from the speed, the reasoning here is to do with why people enjoy a cosy room - small spaces create a feeling of intimacy and warmth.

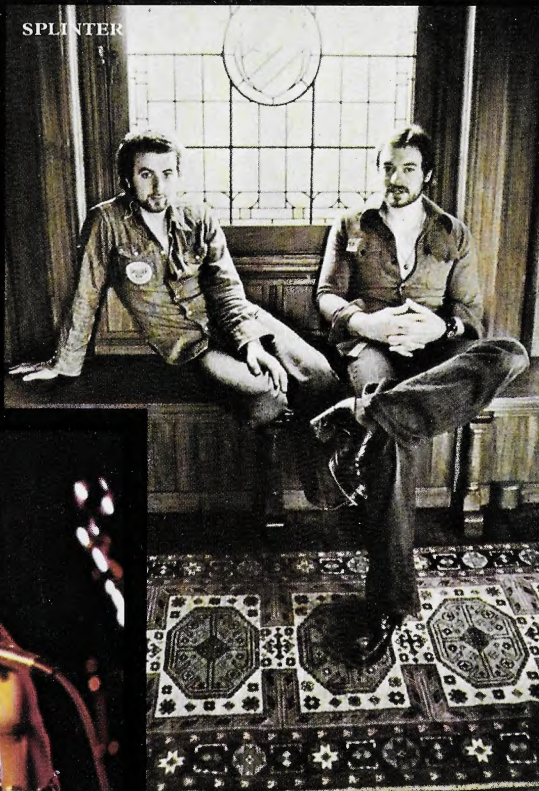

What too few people do though, is to treat the interior of a car like a small room when it comes down to a choice of music. Invariably, people prefer to play in-car what is played at home, which is no surprise at all. The problem is though, that there's a lot of music, particularly heavy rock and progressive material, which neither reproduces well enough nor complements the atmosphere of the car's interior. Just in the same way that classical material demands hi-fi or a beautifully acoustic concert hall.

CHRIS DE BURGH

SPLINTER

JOAN ARMATRADING

So, it is unlikely that many people have realised how to get the most out of “in-car” potential. For those who enjoy the lighter side of this catalogue, there is ample material - Carpenters, Burt Bacharach etc. - which reproduces well and complements such an atmosphere for many people. For those who prefer progressive material, recent trends have led to a far greater supply of material which is perhaps rare in its potential for adding a fresh dimension to in-car music - artists like Valdy, Gino Vannelli, Quincy Jones, Paul Williams and Herb Ohta. All of these create a personal and sensitive expression in their work; pleasure in itself and certainly material which will complement your own moods and experiences. You will find that those listed above are particularly worthwhile. Try some; you won’t be disappointed, and, together, you may learn a thing or two!
